

Workshop on “Best practices in the implementation of Right to Information Act”

A workshop was organized by Centre for Social Justice of J&K Institute of Management, Public Administration & Rural Development (J&K IMPARD) on 20th December 2017. Chief Information Commissioner, Khursheed Ahmed Ganai today stressed on providing voluntary information to the public at regular intervals through various means of communication under Sec 4 of RTI Act.

He further said that Section 4 of RTI Act includes cataloguing, indexing and computerisation of records, publishing certain basic information pertaining to the functioning of the organization.

He made these remarks while addressing the concluding ceremony of a three-day training course on “Best practices in the implementation of Right to Information Act” for officers of various departments.

The departments which participated in the workshop include Department of Information and Public Relations, Department of Forest Protection Force, Hospitality and Protocol and Islamic University of Science and Technology, Awantipura.

On the occasion, the CIC said that it is important that officials, as well as RTI applicants, should have knowledge of the Act so that smooth flow of information takes place.
